

Garage Junk Removal - How To Handle Your Garage Junks

Garage junk removal not only makes property look better, but it also makes it healthier. However, you may be quite unsure how to effectively have your garage junk removed or when is the best time to hire a junk removal company.

Tips To Handle Garage Junk Removal

- Prepare Ahead Of Time

When taking on a large junk removal project like the garage, a little planning ahead can make a big difference. First, be sure to set aside double the amount of time this project is estimated to take. Second, consider a mini-bin rental or dumpster rental depending on the amount of stuff to be thrown away.

- Assess The Situation

The first step in completing a successful junk removal project is to open the garage door and pull everything out. Use the driveway as a staging ground to completely empty the room. This is the best way to see the space as a clean slate and begin reorganizing.

- Touch Everything Once

Now that everything is in plain sight out on the driveway, it is time to begin determining what items stay and which should be donated to charity or trashed. Create piles for each category and begin sifting through the contents.

For the largest impact in regards to junk removal, it is important to be generous when considering which items go to charity or trash and which items stay in the garage. It is generally a good rule of thumb to put anything in the junk removal pile that has not been used in a year.

- Set Priorities

When addressing the items that are going to remain in the garage space, it helps to have an idea of their level of priority. For instance, tools and sporting equipment used on a daily or weekly basis should be easily accessible. Holiday decorations used only annually can be stored in less convenient locations.

- Keep Organized

Once the garage is back in place and the junk removal project is completed, it is easy to return to old habits and begin storing junk back in there again. Resist the temptation to mindlessly throw items into the garage without finding them a proper place. Return tools to their designated areas and keep bikes and sporting equipment from creating one large pile.

When You Should Hire A Junk Removal Company

Ever seen someone tackling those home improvement endeavors and there is old appliances and furniture sitting out in the front yard? Well, that is where a garbage can is not going to cut it and something bigger is. Many garbage companies refuse to take large loads. If you have ever put out a large amount of garbage for the garbage man to pick up on garbage day to find that he only took half of it, then your load was too large. But if you call a junk removal company, they will be happy take away anything you need to get rid of at a reasonable price. If you have old appliances, old concrete, furniture that you want to get rid of, or old junk that is accumulating and taking up space, a junk removal company will take it to the dump for you. They will even get rid of that old junk pile in the back yard that is an eyesore.
