

Pheromones And Fulfilled Sex Lives

Scents and fragrance play a crucial role in developing a good impression. In fact, many male lovers become special and are remembered by women because of the way they smell. Their unique male scent somehow makes them unforgettable. Their "male" scent has become their own very personal, aromatic --- and romantic trademark. A splash of fragrance brings with it the power to spark memories, elicit passion in relationships, and boost romance. Colognes and scents elicit feelings of joy, self-confidence, and a sense of well-being. It's a fact that a lot of women are strongly attracted to men that use a good cologne. In a way, colognes and fragrances have a hypnotic and seductive effect.

Women are more attracted to smell than men and, for that reason, colognes are important to men especially during the dating or courtship stage. This unique smell comes from a chemical produced in the body called Pheromones. Pheromones are chemicals that trigger a natural behavior response in another member of the same species. Pheromones may be alarm pheromones, food trail pheromones, or sex pheromones, and other factors that may affect behavior or physiology. Studies show that men who use colognes with pheromones have increased sexual activity up to 14%. These researches also show that pheromones are produced by insects and animals during mating season. For humans, the pheromones are detected at an almost subconscious level since human pheromones have a very subtle smell.

According to a study published by the University of Colorado, these pheromones are detected through the nose. A group of cells responsible for detecting human sex hormones are said to be inside the opening of the nose. The pheromones are transmitted in the same way as perfume is detected on another person. Pheromones give off a "chemical message" of sexual attraction from the nose to the hypothalamus, the brain's center of emotions. Human pheromones are produced by the human body and are released in sweat glands.

Both men and women produce pheromones but their ability to produce the substance had been reduced because of the use of deodorants, soaps, and other products that contain alcohol. This fact is unfortunate considering the importance of pheromones in the social and sexual life of a person. The good news is that human pheromone products are available in the market and are used as supplemental ingredients in cologne. In fact, mail ordering is a service provided by many pheromone product companies. With the increase in the demand for pheromone products, many people have begun ordering these products through the Internet. This form of service, also known as Order Taking Service, is a critical aspect of a company's ability to accept customer orders on-line. When potential customers have made decisions to purchase a product, all they have to do is call a toll-free number and place their orders. Order Taking Services can handle any call volume and any product size catalog, from single product catalogs on 24/7 basis. Payment is usually done by checks, credit cards, and money orders. Most companies offer the "right to return" goods or cancel the order within a period of seven days.

In addition, these companies carry many brands to choose from at prices better than those in retail markets. Such purchases also save time because in just a click of a mouse, these supplements can be bought and delivered right to a customer's doorstep.
