

Moroccan furniture that look great and provide useful storage

Moroccan furniture is a blend of coastal furniture making styles and quality Spanish craftsmanship. Like any coastal nation, Moroccan furniture incorporates various materials that are sourced from the sea (like mother of pearl). Moroccan carpets and rugs have already made a name for themselves the world over, and Moroccan furniture is expected to follow suit. Although Moroccan furniture is already popular among home owners the world over; there has been a recent influx of Chinese made Moroccan furniture in the market and only a handful of dealers and websites are actually offering authentic Moroccan furniture online.

Apart from wood, Moroccan furniture also incorporates various other materials like mother of pearl and camel bone. The diversity in craftsmanship and materials used has made Moroccan furniture extremely desirable. From mother of pearl chests to Demna benches, there is something for every room, and people all over the world have fallen in love with the class, grace and style of Moroccan furniture.

Armoires are one of the most popular pieces of Moroccan furniture and Moroccan Armoires are designed with more than just storage in mind.

Moroccan Armoires are much broader and taller when compared to their European counterparts, but Moroccan furniture makers treat their Armoires as canvases and use a variety of materials to decorate them. Moroccan Armoires are decorated using camel bone, marble and mother of pearl and are usually crafted from cedar wood. Known for their intricate designs and exquisite craftsmanship, Moroccan Armoires are fast becoming one of the most effective ways of decorating a bedroom without compromising on storage space.

Moroccan furniture also offers buffets and kitchen cabinets, and people have started using cabinets and buffets for a variety of purposes. Moroccan furniture pieces like cabinets are popularly used as bars and libraries and are made from carved wood and other natural materials. Morocco's rich history has ensured that its furniture is a blend of Moorish, European and Medina furniture making styles which ensures that Moroccan furniture can compliment any décor.

Moroccan furniture also offers various carved furniture items like sofas and settees and Moorish benches are one of the most popular furniture items available. Known for their simplistic yet appealing designs, Moorish benches are the ideal choice for any drawing room. With intricately carved edges and Sabra tapestry, Moorish benches are a must have when it comes to Moroccan furniture.

Moroccan dining tables have also made a name for themselves and Moroccan dining tables are made from quality cedar wood, and are usually decorated with additional metallic work. Since a majority of dining tables are hand carved and are thus famous for their 'detail', the dining tables are can make subtle yet classy additions to any home. In fact, irrespective of the décor of a house Moroccan furniture can mould itself to any décor and make a welcome addition to any home. What is equally impressive about Moroccan furniture is the truly multinational influence that the furniture exhibits. From Mediterranean influences to Moorish sculpting there is a touch of everything in Moroccan furniture.

Moroccan mosaic tables are also a fantastic option when it comes to making a definitive fashion statement. Each Moroccan mosaic table is hand carved and assembled by putting together individual tiles or mosaic pieces. Although traditional Moroccan mosaic tables are round, modern day Moroccan mosaic tables are also semi-circular and the table tops are usually crafted from materials like stone, marble and wood. Some Moroccan mosaic tables are a combination of wrought iron, wood and other materials, and are considered nothing short of collector's items. The diversity in design and materials used means that Moroccan mosaic tables can cost anything between $800 and $200, and people from all walks for life can buy themselves a Moroccan mosaic table. Popular shapes for table tops include circles, ovals and semi-circles.
