Processing your own film allowed for a high degree of freedom and creativity back in the film age. Digital photo processing opens a whole new world of opportunities for the creative mind. But do you have the time to process your digital pictures one by one? Do you have the desire to learn, and do you have the money to buy the required image processing tools? If you don't want to spend days and weeks learning how to do this, and wish to get results right away and without breaking the bank, read on!

What do you do most often with your digital photos? Do you remember having a film camera with that cool imprinting feature that stamped the date you took a picture onto each photograph? They don't often include this in digital cameras anymore. But all is not lost in this department, as you can easily stamp dates onto digital pictures in a much simpler way than you would do it with film! PicJet Studio imprints the date you've taken the picture on a single photo or on a bunch of photographs quickly and easily. Learning curve? What learning curve! Just learn how to drag and drop the pictures onto the Stamp icon, and you're all set! Unlike the film ages, you can now select your own font and color to make the date look exactly as you had hoped.
