

Vector Marketing gives Students a Sales Edge

In today's highly competitive job market, having an edge is an invaluable asset. Students seeking exceptional opportunities in training for business and marketing need to look no further than Vector Marketing. Students can attain the training and skills that will set them apart, and then gain the ability to present a strong resume to future employers. Vector Marketing is a North America direct sales industry that provides an outstanding experience for college and university students and graduates in sales and sales management. Vector Marketing is staffed by highly motivated and experienced professionals. In business since 1949, Vector Marketing has over 200 locations and generates $197 million in yearly sales while offering a quality product, Cutco Cutlery, which carries a "Forever Guarantee". Students may be able to earn academic credit for what they learn while working with Vector Marketing and, at the same time, hone skills in real market environments as part of a sales force in a winning company. The training is especially beneficial for business majors but has proven helpful to students in majors in all fields from political science to human relations and finance. Vector Marketing provides valuable sales experience and offers the chance to build the hands on skills needed for a successful business career. Students can earn a good income, which is paid per appointment and is not dependent on sales. Training rates vary by location, and there are incentive programs based on performance. Geared toward the student, Vector Marketing offers flexible work schedules. Students who take a position with Vector may find they qualify for an academic internship. To pursue this option, students must already be on board with the company and have a proven degree of success. In such cases, Vector Marketing will work with the student's academic advisor; provide a recommendation letter and Vector Marketing information on becoming a sales intern. As a result of this training from Vector Marketing, students will learn and work in real world sales environments beyond text and lecture, beyond concepts and theories, to achieve strength and confidence in communication, time management, study skill, professionalism, leadership, creative thinking, goal setting, and teamwork.

Interested students will be encouraged to learn that Vector Marketing provides $50,000 dollars in scholarships based on work performance , and offers advancement opportunities from within; all top management are from the Vector Marketing program. Through Vector Marketing, students can learn the real-life business skills needed for real success.

About the Author

Vector Marketing is an international direct sales company that markets Cutco Cutlery, a line of high quality kitchen products, sporting knives, gardening tools and accessories. Vector Marketing has sales operations throughout the United States and Canada.

Source: <http://www.tntarticles.com>