

Wedding Photography Tips – Because marriages are made in heaven

Wedding Photography Tips – Because marriages are made in heaven

Are you getting married next month? Or is someone in your family planning to get married and you want to make sure that you capture every single precious moment on that auspicious day? Are planning to buy a new camera or planning to bring out your camera, which you have hardly used because they somehow never seem to get the right picture? Well, although photography is something that a lot of people practice as a profession and in fact there are professional wedding photographers, it's definitely not rocket science and almost every one of us can get good pictures if not comparable to professionals.

But there are a lot of things that need to be taken care of when planning to take photographs on a wedding day. We will discuss in further detail about it in the coming few paragraphs.

Camera

In case you are planning to buy a new camera, you must make sure that it has a good quality flash and resolution. The higher the number of pixels the better. In any case you must try to pick up the best that you can within your budget. You can easily get good quality digital cameras from the likes of Canon, Nikon, Olympus and Sony within $400-$500.

In case you are planning to use your old camera, make sure that the lens is clean. In case you are not sure, use only a soft and dry cotton cloth to clean it. If it's one which uses a reel, you must clean the moving parts too with a soft cotton cloth so that it does not get jammed while shooting.

Tips and Suggestions

A wedding takes place only once (for most of us) and therefore, every moment must be captured. If you are taking photographs then you must make sure that you try and click as many picture as possible. The aim is not to click photographs for any award ceremony but for someone to cherish and remember their special day at some later date in their lives.

Buy a book on photography or borrow it from a friend or a library. You don't have to go into the intricacies of shooting but only understand how various factors like light or wind might help you to enhance the image quality or might decrease the quality of your picture.

Not even the bravest can win a war with a toy gun. Make sure that you don't end up looking like a jackass on the big day. Take with you a good quality camera. It should be at least 7-mega pixels and preferably a SLR.

Don't miss to take the photographs of the bride and groom individually. Take a few from all the different angles that you can so that they can choose later on and pick the best for the cover of their wedding album. Also take a few group photographs involving their parents, brothers and sisters and close friends.

And yes, don't miss the kiss. It's always the kiss of a lifetime unlike any other.

About the Author

Weddinglenox is the author of this article on Wedding photography. Find more information about Wedding photo here.

Source: <http://www.tntarticles.com>